Dance Place and Orange Grove Dance Launch Liminal Dance Film Festival

The Three-Day Festival Brings 70 Films From 18 Countries to DC

WASHINGTON, DC (March 16, 2026): Dance Place's milestone 45th season continues with an exciting new event coming to its main building: Liminal (LMNL) Dance Film Festival will take place April 24-26, 2026. Converging international and local voices, LMNL presents interdisciplinary art with installations of dance, film and design over a three-day festival, seamlessly bringing together 70 films from 18 countries. Festival passes and tickets are on sale now, and can be purchased here.

Produced and directed by Dance Place resident company Orange Grove Dance, celebrates dance film and projection mapping as powerful artistic mediums. Featuring artists whose interdisciplinary practices push the boundaries of dance cinema, the festival highlights work that reflects movement's profound ability to connect, transform, and reveal.

"Liminal seeks to champion voices from around the world while highlighting the incredible talent of the DMV region, creating a platform where local and international artists converge to explore new dimensions of movement on screen," said Colette Krogol and Matt Reeves, co-artistic directors of Orange Grove Dance. As artists living and working at the intersections of dance, design, and film, their vision animates the festival with a rare blend of creativity, innovation, and interdisciplinary depth.

LMNL is part of a series of events happening at Dance Place this spring, reinforcing the theme Home is Coming: Inspiration, Connection, Action. For Krogol and Reeves, LMNL represents a long-held dream, one that expands the space for artists who blur boundaries between movement and media. Much like Orange Grove Dance's acclaimed dance films and their annual summer intensive, the festival reflects their belief that film, media, and bold programming can transform how artists make work and how audiences encounter dance in everyday life.
